A Knife Found That Probably Killed Gross at Maspeth.

Coroner's Physician Discards the Theory of Suicide.

The mystery surrounding the death of Karl Gross, of 161 Varot street, Brooklyn, whose body was found in a clump of bushes near the old South Side Railroad at Maspeth, L. I., Wednesday afternoon is still unsolved.

Coroner's Physician Vincent E. Judson, of Maspeth, this morning performed an autopsy on the body at the residence of Mrs. Gross, and his discoveries indicate that the man was murdered.

The knife, which is supposed to have caused the fatal wound, was yesterday found by a World reporter imbedded in the earth only a few feet away from the spot where the unfortunate man's body was found.

It is a coarse, bone-handled affair, somewhat similar to those commonly used by sailors, and might easily have fitted the wound which caused Gross's death.

At the conclusion of the autopsy Dr. Judson said to an EVENING WORLD reporter:

"The knife wound in the chest of the body pierced the uniform cartilage transversely, and penetrated the largest lobe of the liver, in a direction downward, backward and to the right.

The wound was inflicted by a knife-blade between three-quarters of an inch and one inch in width, and was cut three and one-half inches in depth. The wound could not have been inflicted by an ordinary penknife, such as Gross was said to be carrying.

"There was also a bruise, beginning about one inch above the right eyebrow, about one and one-half inches in diameter. The nose was also badly bruised. Both bruises may have resulted from a forward fall on the face. The skull was not fractured.

"The peculiar features of the case are an absence of any of the signs of suicide, and the presence of about two tablespoonfuls of a substance, which was a mixture of green paint, which had been smeared on to the man's body in a sort of paste.

"This green paint was evidently placed there for some purpose, whether by the man himself or some one else, I cannot say. It had not been used as a cure for any disease, for there were no evidences of disease present. Neither was there any evidence of any disease in the man's system.

"At any rate, the substance did not cause the man's death. The substance was found in the stomach, and it is probable that it was taken at the opening of his throat.

"The wounds would not have caused death as quickly as it had, had the heart been pierced. In any event, he could not have long survived. I regard it as a murder case.

Parts were also found on the grass near Gross's body.

Mrs. Gross was again seen by an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning, and reiterated that her husband had no reason to fear any one. She denied that she had ever had a knife like that near her body.

Neither did Mr. Gross believe that his husband had been deceiving her and had spent his time in Warner's saloon, on Graham avenue, while telling her that he was at work.

He left his last situation voluntarily, she said, and was not discharged for drunkenness. He sometimes drank a glass of beer, but never got drunk.

The report that his wife, who carried with her a cross at Warner's saloon Monday night, had been arrested at Maspeth, was denied by the man's wife.

The Emperor's Triumphal Progress to the Guildhall.

French Hamlet Burned—Fifty Families Homeless.

As the procession left the palace every quarter within and without the city boundaries peals of bells rang out from the church steeples and announced joyfully to the expectant masses that the imperial pageant had commenced.

Though there were great crowds at every point, the real density of the masses of spectators commenced at Charing Cross and about the streets debouching there. Pall Mall, Trafalgar Square, Whitehall, Northumberland avenue, Cockspur street and the Haymarket were packed as far as the eye could see.

Up the Strand the decorations were superb, not through unity of design, at which there was no attempt, but through sheer plenitude of display. Every inch of the way from the Strand to Guildhall abounded in color.

The reception of the Prince of Wales along the line was a mixed character. At points he was received with unqualified cordiality and at others loud boodges quite dominated the scene.

The imperial party reached Guildhall at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. The Lord Mayor received the guests at the entrance, and a procession was formed and moved to the library, where a Court of Common Council was held and the Recorder of the City of London read an address which was afterwards presented to the Emperor in a splendid gold casket, richly enamelled and decked with precious stones.

That Is What Rev. Mr. Comer's Wife Says To-Day.

But There's No Trace of Him or Farmer Tappen's Wife.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

NORTH PLAINFIELD, N. J., July 10.—Although Farmer George Washington Tappen says his wife has eloped with Rev. George Comer, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Ansonia, Pastor Comer's wife will not believe the story.

She says the fact that Mrs. Tappen and Comer have disappeared, and were seen going away together, has no significance whatever. Mrs. Tappen made no secret of her departure.

She is a strong-minded woman and her word was law, so when she said to her husband yesterday that she was going away and would take the furniture with her, he did not say a word nor try to stop the removal of his household effects when a truckman came for them an hour later.

The alleged intimacy of his wife and Rev. Comer was common talk hereabouts, but the simple-minded man never suspected anything wrong until after his wife went away and he found a letter from Comer to his (Tappen's) wife, in which he addressed her as "dear pet," said he was homesick without her, and that he would like to see her.

After reading that with a jealous and angry heart, Tappen's wife, who was then in the city, sent a letter to her husband, in which she told him that she was going away and would take the furniture with her, and that she would like to see him.

Then he started out to find Rev. Mr. Comer. He suddenly dawned upon him that the frequent visits of the pastor were not so much to the church as to the house, and that he was making love to the woman who was his wife.

This afternoon he went to Plainfield to consult the chief of police and the sheriff, with a view of having the pastor arrested, if he could not be found. He was told that he was not in the city, and that he was probably in the city.

Comer does not live with them. A short time ago he was in the city, and was reported to be a deacon of the church. It was the same day that he was in the city, and he was reported to be a deacon of the church.

Mrs. Comer said she was not giving information that would put her in the position of a detective. She was not a detective, and she was not a detective.
